leposits his vote to-morrow.

THE wives of those workingmen who in the moment of deception voted the Democratic ticket and who have lost so much of their former comfort on account of of their former comfort on account of the change in administration, should see and that is by constitutional remedies that thhir husbands go to the polls Tuesday and vote the Republican ticket.

To-morenow is the city election and every Republican has a duty to perform. That duty is to vote and make the majorities as large as possible. Big Repubhean majorities count by way of giving the administration notice that the people are not in sympathy with its policies.

characterized it as "a rule to nominate Thomas Brackett Reed for president of the United States," Well, the Demothings than that.

BLAND has given notice that another free csinage silver bill will be introduced. If Bland finds any enjoyment in this it is all right, as it will do no one harm. With Cleveland at one end ready to the other end knocking out Cleveland and his suicidal free-trade policy, the country may manage to get along until the Republicans get control of the government and put the machinery in run-

The Democratic state central committee, it will be remembered, some months ago passed a resolution demanding that the Republicans be turned out of office and Democrats put in their principles. This showed some vigor on the part of the Democratic committee toward the powers at Washington, but while they were doing this the people of Illinois rose up Tuesday, April 3, and knocked the Democrats out regardless of the fact that the Democratic party professed to have principles.

Democratic Reedism.

The great and dangerous trouble with the Democratic party is the dishonesty of purpose of its leaders and their ignorance of the great practical systems to prejudices for votes, and on this account, when in control of affairs, they must fail, because they apply the same system of doing things covertly, or by indirection, to legislating and administering the government. Thus, the Hawaiian affair is an example of their methods, and so is the administration of the affairs of the pension office and the treasury department. These leaders. being engaged in this work of deception and dishonesty of purpose disagree among themselves as to the best method of deceiving the people in his own locality. Cleveland works to set up a parade of gaudily attired deception in one way. Hill wants to do it in another way and the Louisiana senators prefer a different way, while Bland, of Missouri. eled to the other, by the word Democ-

The Democratic party has become utterly worthless and impotent. It has NEED WALL PAPER, Window Shades, Room Mouldings, Lace, Che-Beed, to defeat the purposes of a large revolutionary minority, adopted the concounting those present and not voting to make a quorum, the Democratic leaders called that act the suppression of the rights of the minority, arbitrary and unconstitutional, and every "pinchback" Democrat in the country, having his prejudice touched, reiterated the dec quorum present for duty. The Republi-

Dolliver, Cannon and others, insisted that the quorum conuting rules should be adopted as the honest way out of the trouble, but Crisp and his followers refused to accede to his request and in every possible way, awkwardly attempted to make the same result by indirection along dishonest paths. They pre-.$5.00 ferred an attempt to deceive the people te an honest open course. Failing, as Per week, 10 cents; Yearly, in advance $5.00 Postal eard requests, or orders through tele-hone No. 43, will secure early attention of car-and Hoke Smith, in the pension policy, they were at last driven, just as Cleveland and Smith were, to abandon their dishonesty and come to something practical, and have, agreed in caucus to the Reed plan of counting a quorum. This is humiliating to them, of course, but dishenest people rarely escape humiliation, no matter in what or where that dishonesty is practiced. There is a A. H. SCTTON right way to conduct the business of congress and the government, and there is only one right way. The Republicans R. W. FERGUSON have sought that way and made the JOHN H. KNAPP government a success. The Democrats cannot make it a success any other way EVERY Republican should see that he and the quicker they quit trying it the better it will be for the country.

They have adopted the Recdrules, and The Democratic party has not the they should now adopt the balance of power of self preservation when respons | the Republican methods, then they will ible for legislation. A POPULAR VERDICT.

Madeline Pollard Wins Her Case Against Col. Breckinridge,

WITH FIFTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS

As a Salve for Her Disappointment-Scenes and Incidents of the Last Day of the Trial-How the Verdict Was Received.

A Sensational Tilt Between Judge Wilson and Lawyer Stell.

WASHINGTON, April 15. - During his closing argument in the Pollard-Breckinridge breach-of-promise suit yesterday, the expert testimony was taken up by Judge Wilson and torn in tatters. He said it was time that legislation put a stop to this travesty on justice, where experts got $25, $50 or $100 a day, according to how hard they were willing to swear. The time would come, he said, when the court and not litigants in a case would select the experts; and until that was done there would not be any justice or decency in expert testimony. The Morey-barfield forgery was cited as an instance of difference in expert testi-

A sensational scene was narrowly averted a minute later when Judge Wilson said that the alleged forgery was based on the letter which Madeline Pollard had written to Wessie Brown, her schoolmate. "The evidence in this case shows," he said, "that they got the letter from the hus-band of Wessie Brown, Mr. Robinson. The evidence shows that Mr. Stoll carried that Wessie Brown letter around

At this Mr. Stoll turned to Mr. Breckinridge and said a few words. "Shall I say something" he asked. Col. Breckinridge nodded, and Mr. Stoll, his face very white, asked Judge Wilson in a calm voice: "Do you mean to insinuate, Judge Wilson, that I committed that forgery?"

"I do not," said Judge Wilson, defiantly. "I mean to say that you carried around the Wessie Brown letter in your possession."

"Do you mean to insinuate that I was a party to that forgery?" Mr. Stoll persisted, his face livid, but his words

"I mean to say that you had that Wessie Brown letter in your possession and on that letter this forgery was based," replied Judge Wilson had it in your possession, did you

"Well, that's all I say. And I want to say this, too, that those gentlemen are not going to take me away from the discharge of my duty by their interruptions in refuting these charges against my client. That's what I A minute later there was a covert warning given in the court room that may mean much Judge Wilson, sit-ting quietly in the witness box waitng until the jury was through with iits inspection of the letter asserted to made no attempt at explanation, and just then Judge Bradley, looking somewhat estonished, stopped the embryo Mrs Breekinridge was in waiting and

'Now, gentlemen, enough of this," he said, "such conduct is unseemly." Judge Wilson bowed and went on speaking. Later in the day the judge made a statement to the jury disclaiming any intention of having intimated that Mr. Stoll was guilty of forgery or personally a party to it.

Mr. Wilson in conclusion asked the jury to impale the defendant with the javelin of justice, and hold him aloft on it as an example to others disposed to wrongdoing, and Justice would cry out "Amen."

Judge Wilson finished at 2.28 o'clock. and the Court immediately began his charge to the jury, reading from manuscript. He said:

uscript. He said:

Gentlemen of the Juny—It is a subject for great congratulation that this long and, in many respects tedious case, has at last reached that point where the evidence having all been given and the arguments of councel delivered, it becomes the duty of the court to commit the outcome to your hands. It is a mattar of congratulation to the community that a case which has attracted so much general attention and notice, and which, in the details of its evidence and in its circumstances, has been so extremely permissions in its influences, and which has colored and polinied the stream of daily news for so many weeks has run its weary length, and it is a matter of congratulation to you, that having served many days beyond the required time of service which the law ordinarily would have demanded of you. You may now, upon the rendering of your vegdict at least, be free from this labor and be permitted to return to your daily avocations.

The charge was quite lengthy and

The charge was quite lengthy and clearly indicated the duty of the jury in their deliberations. The judge com-mended all connected with the case as witnesses, and with exceptions the counsel, for the delicate manner in which they had handled matter in itself unfit for utterance in any court of justice, and closed as follows: To sum it all up, if you fail to find that a con-tract was made or that the defendant was ex-cused from performance of it, your verdies should be for the defendant. If, however, you find that such a contract did exist and the de-fendant was not released therefrom you are to find for the plantiff.

crowded, and absolute silence pre-vailed. At his close the jury, at 3:07 p. m., were taken in charge by a couple of bailiffs, and were escorted to a chamber over the court room to deliberate upon their verdict.

Judge Bradley remained in his chair for a few minutes after the jury went out, and then he walked around to the attorneys' room, where he waited news from the jury. The court room rapidly cleared.

Col. Breckinridge and his counsel started for the office of Mr. McKenzie, the junior counsel, just across the street, and as he was coming down the court house steps an open barouche with two ladies in it drove up, and he waited on the curbstone to receive them. The ladies were Col. Breckinridge's wife and one of his daughters second marriage. The three chatted for a while, and then the ladies drove away, leaving Col. Breckinridge standing on the pavement. His face was smiling, and he laughed heartily as he joined his counsel.

Judge Wilson and Mr. Carlisle, Miss dict at Mr. Carlisle's office opposite the courthouse, with their client, who remained remarkably cool. Miss Ellis, the motherly lady from the House of Mercy was also there The brother of connection with the case, formed another of the party.

About a hundred men remained in the court room to secure good seats when the jury returned.

At 4:40 the jurymen informed the bailiffs who had them in charge that they had agreed. Judge Bradley was later, the jury filed slowly in, flanked Almost immediately behind them came Col. Breckinridge, easy and de-bonnaire as usual, with Col. Phil Thompson, Desha Breckinridge and Mr. McKinney, who has not appeared in the case except to disclaim on the day after Lawyer Shelby slapped Sawyer Johnson's face, that he carried a gun. They sat down in their usual places and looked straight ahead.

While Judge Bradley waited for Miss Pollard's counsel to appear, the big room was quiet and still

At 4:40 Calderon Carlisle, Miss Pollard's attorney, entered and had hardly sat down, when the clerk called the usual question:

"Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon a verdict?"

Foreman Cole, the oldest man of the twelve, rose slowly and answered: "We died and v have agreed upon a verdict, and find for his death. the plaintaff

"In what amount of damages?" asked the clerk.

"Fateen thousand dollars," was the answer.

There was not a sound in the room. Judge Bradley had taken occasion to warn the spectators just before the verdict was rendered that demonstrations of approval or disapproval from the spectators would not be tolerated, and every man there heeded the warning. (ol. Breekinridge had sat leaning forward during the colloquy be-tween the foreman and the clerk, and when the verdict was announced he did not change color or manifest any in signs of nervousness. When Poteman Cole announced the amount Col Breekinridge turned to Col Thompson and asked, "How much?"

When the foreman had sat down Col. Breekinridge rose quickly to his feet and asked in his musical voice "If your honor pleases, within what time
